Getting Pupils to Speak: Teaching speaking at upper primary

When asked what is most important about learning English, most students will say that it is speaking. This seminar focuses on teaching speaking to primary school pupils, comparing activities focusing on teaching spoken accuracy and fluency and evaluating their effectiveness and appropriateness for different levels of English.

Warmers and Coolers for Teenagers

Without an effective start and a meaningful end a great lesson may not realise its full potential. In this workshop we will explore a number of short, enjoyable and communicative activities used as warmers to wake up, motivate and enthuse learners, and consider how coolers can be used effectively to wrap up and close a lesson. The warmers and coolers demonstrated in the workshop are versatile, and can be used in teaching both language and skills for all levels and abilities, with a view to making learning not just more fun, but also more productive.
