The Bourne Conundrum - Maturita Skills In Action

Help Jason Bourne discover his true identity through a treasure hunt of riddles, puzzles and clues! Using OUP Maturita Solutions and Headway, you'll be given ways to make English in the classroom engaging and memorable. Your students won't look at their textbooks the same way again!

Maturita help is also at hand using Bridge & Gate magazines, with exam skills and exercises supporting your effort to help students pass their exams. Pop culture examples combine with lively activities to make English study relevant and fun.

If I'm not learning, I'm helping someone who is.

Andrew Power is a business English and soft skills coach from the UK, with expertise in personal productivity, writing and marketing. He is an expert assessor for the City & Guilds written exam, and a contributor to Bridge and Gates magazines.

Presentation Skills for students (and teachers)

The term 'presentation skills' sounds very technical, like something that belongs in the world of business, rather than in a secondary school. However, the main point of teaching these skills is simply to help people, any people, to communicate more effectively.

This is valuable in itself, especially for students facing spoken exams. Beyond this, spending time on the physical aspects of producing language can have deep motivational benefits in terms of helping students to 'own' their second language.

This workshop will introduce the basics of good oral communication and briefly discuss the methodology behind it. Mostly though, it will introduce a number of very enjoyable practical activities that teachers can do with students in the classroom to reinforce their communication skills.

David Fisher is the founder and director of The Bear Educational Theatre. The Bear aims to motivate students of English by creating and performing interactive theatre shows. Over the last fifteen years the theatre has enjoyed great success in seven different European countries, while David himself has been invited to lead methodology workshops at many conferences. David has featured in over 20 films including Dune, Joan of Arc, and Doctor Zhivago, A Knight's Tale and Hitler: The Rise of Evil (TV versions).
