ABSTRACT
In this paper we will discuss how positive psychology can contribute to the design of digital games and in particular training applications like Serious Games. While digital games have been known for their ability to deeply immerse users, stimulate the senses and tap into a broad range of emotions, it has proven rather challenging to use them as a vehicle for pedagogy. Relevant research is still at its infancy and many of the mechanisms that foster knowledge creation and enhance learning need to be mapped out before scripted in the game. The theory of psychological flow and the role of positive emotions in broadening people's thought-action repertoires bring some practical insights and pave the path for tackling some important design questions. Yet there are still major challenges and uncharted waters to be explored in order for the technology to deliver what has been promised.

A Hypothesis Concerning the Character of Islamic Art

Asli Gocer

From: Journal of the History of Ideas
Volume 60, Number 4, October 1999
pp. 683-692 | 10.1353/jhi.1999.0037

In lieu of an abstract, here is a brief excerpt of the content:
Journal of the History of Ideas 60.4 (1999) 683-692

Why Islamic art has the distinctive features it has continues to generate clashing explanations. The Islamic visual treasury has no figural images, for instance, and three-dimensional sculpture or large scale oil painting, but instead contains miniatures, vegetal ornaments, arabesque surface patterns, and complex geometrical designs. To account for the phenomena the following radically opposing theories have been offered: the influence of Judaism, the Quranic prohibition against making images, Islamic resentment of the glory of Byzantine icons, logocentricism of classical Islam, the spiritual dimension of Islam, tacit Islamic assertion of "otherness," and contingency of history. The merits of these theories have been roundly discussed in the literature, and so I will not repeat the task here. I will insist that none of these theories offer a coherent explanation for all arts, but my presumption is that such an explanation is possible. In nonvisual arts the Muslim prefers simple tunes over that of the symphony, for instance, whirling dervishes over the ballet, and lyric poetry over
